Research shows that adverse childhood experiences (ACES) and potentially traumatic events have lasting negative effects on health and well-being in adulthood. These experiences range from physical, emotional, or sexual abuse, to parental divorce or the incarceration of a parent or guardian. Participate in a hands-on, interactive workshop designed to expand your knowledge base and add effective interventions to your professional toolkit when providing services to young children, adolescents, and teens with a history of ACES (adverse childhood experiences).

Who should attend:	Objectives:
-Counselors	-Review concepts of child development
-Mental Health Professionals	-Promote Healthy child development
- Social Workers	-Support nurturing parenting styles
-Case managers	-Provide effective behavior interventions
-Healthcare Providers
